DIESEL LIVING COLLECTION 2017 - PRETTY VACANCY

Diesel Living hits the desert roads, and finds a barren landscape full of possibilities... From Arizona to California, the American highway rolls past windblown mesas, spindly cactuses, and sandy no-man's-lands, where rusty shades of copper, clay, and amber reveal themselves in sunbaked layers of the panorama.

Out here, low-slung houses blend with the land, their inside worlds mingling with the outside terrain in the seasonless heat of the sand flats. A functional maximalism guides the aesthetic towards a distinctive, nature-inspired declaration of Desert Modernism.

Materials of wood, stone, and metal compose strong interiors and resistant exteriors. Minerals come straight from the desert floor into the home. A rigorous sense of the contemporary mirrors the linearity of the twenties and thirties, along with the earthy fusion of home and nature derived from the fifties and sixties. In the empty spaces, the land of possibilities emerges — a desert landscape...
